Bonds: News & Comments

Liquidity recovers slightly

Banking sector liquidity rose a slight UAH0.49bn to UAH71.33bn last Friday as banks' correspondent accounts with the NBU increased UAH0.38bn to UAH23.57bn and total CDs outstanding rose UAH0.11bn to UAH47.77bn.

Investment implications: Liquidity continues to recover, albeit slightly, most likely as funds were spent at the FX market and the MoF made no significant expenditures at the beginning of the month. There could be repayments of long-term loans which banks received last year or at the beginning of this year, the same as older loans or stabilization loans issued by the NBU. These repayments also could reduce the increase in liquidity.

IMF head's visit to Kyiv

Sunday's visit of Christine Lagarde to Kyiv could provide a boost to Ukraine's authorities in their drive to navigate the economy through the ongoing reforms despite the Kremlin's aggression and the protracted deep recession. As reported by WSJ.com, Lagarde praised Ukraine for its ambitious reforms record. President Poroshenko greeted the IMF head, thanking her for her support in general and particularly in the talks with private creditors. This could be a sign that Poroshenko's faction in the parliament this week will support the deal reached with private creditors. Also, this Sunday's rhetoric suggests that Ukraine is most likely meeting the targets necessary to receive the next IMF funding tranche scheduled to be disbursed in November or early December. There was no comment regarding the IMF's view on the status of the US$3bn Russian debt which most likely was discussed yesterday. The IMF's silence suggests that officials are still considering options on how to deal with the debt in practical terms.
