Liquidity to decline further

Banking sector liquidity yesterday was down UAH3.35bn to UAH83.28bn, the lowest level since October 2015. The decline began on August 12, 2016 and should continue this week, albeit less significantly. Banks' correspondent accounts with the NBU fell UAH1.31bn to UAH36.03bn while total CDs outstanding contracted UAH2.03bn to UAH47.24bn.

Investment implications: Liquidity probably declined due to quarterly and month-end tax payments that began last week and will continue through the end of the month. Although there was market demand for FX, the NBU did not hold FX auctions, the usual source for additional liquidity. Liquidity could recover most likely no earlier than the beginning of September.

Auction announcement

Today, the MoF will offer five local currency denominated bonds, including one UAH/USD indexed bond with a 7-year maturity and the remaining regular bonds with maturities from five months to two years. The indexed bond will have same day settlement, while the remaining bonds will settle on Thursday, due to tomorrow's Independence Day holiday.

Investment implications: Interest rates might decline, as zero-coupon bonds should be 15.5-16%, while 2-year bond bids should come in no lower than 16.20%. Indexed bonds could see bids unchanged from last week at 6.50%, but demand is expected to be minimal due to its long maturity. Demand should be mostly concentrated on 2-year bonds.
