Yield curve remains unchanged

Comment on government bond placement

WEDNESDAY, 15 NOVEMBER 2017

The MoF yet again rejected demand for bonds this month, maintaining the yield curve set at the end of October. Yesterday demand of UAH200m (par value) was up nearly twenty-fold from last week at a single bid of 14.90%, or 20bp above the cut-off rate set two weeks ago.

Current low debt repayments and high rates due to quarterly and month-end tax payment obligations do not support the current yield curve. This was the second consecutive week that banks submitted bids above the cutoff rate.

Next week, demand for local currency bonds should be low and bid interest rates could like be submitted above the yield curve. However, the majority of demand should be concentrated on 2-year FX-denominated bonds next week most likely with rates higher by a few basis points at worst. Demand for FX-denominated bonds is expected to be at least US$300m as next week the MoF is scheduled to repay US$288.69m in FX debt repayments. Beyond refinancing repayments, there could be additional new demand.
